The Program I am going to study is Clinical mental health counseling Which encompasses the services that trained professionals provide to clients who seek help in dealing with issues that affect their lives. According to the American Psychological Association (APA), those issues can include personal problems or issues of a behavioral, emotional, marital, vocational, rehabilitative, educational or life-stage nature. The APA further describes counseling services as the help that professionals such as psychologists, licensed counselors, nurses and social workers provide through government, mental health or social service agencies. Professionals offer those services to groups, families and individuals.

Ramandeep Kaur.
