Coming from a chemistry background, I developed an interest in exploring the connection between science and health, leading me toward healthcare. My studies in chemistry helped me understand the biochemical side of food and how nutrition affects overall health. This curiosity inspired me to volunteer with a group focused on improving nutritional health in remote areas.

involve We worked to educate and support people who lacked access to essential health resources.

Through this hands-on experience, I saw how proper nutrition can greatly impact public health, especially in underserved communities. By regularly engaging with these communities, I helped raise awareness about healthy eating habits and their importance for well-being. This experience not only gave me a deeper understanding of the challenges faced by these communities but also strengthened my passion for promoting better health through nutrition. It inspired me to further my education and pursue an MBA in healthcare. My goal is to combine my knowledge of chemistry with healthcare management to improve health outcomes and make a positive difference in people's lives.

This curiosity inspired me to form a group of friends and take an initiative on improving nutritional health in remote areas.
