With the completion of my senior secondary education in 2024, I developed a strong interest in data privacy and security, recognizing its growing importance in today's digital age. While studying this field, I learned about the challenges businesses face in complying with global regulations like complex compliance processes, weak data protection policies, and inadequate auditing practices. I realized the need for robust data protection strategies, employee training, and effective compliance tools to safeguard personal data. Inspired to address these issues, I decided to pursue a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science. This program will equip me with the technical skills to develop secure systems, ensure compliance with data privacy laws, and help businesses protect sensitive information in an increasingly digital world.

I cultivated a keen interest in data privacy and security, acknowledging its increasingly significant role in today's digital landscape. Throughout my studies in this field, I discovered obstacles companies encounter in adhering to international regulations. I believe it is essential to improve my technical abilities to create secure systems. Therefore, I have chosen to pursue a bachelor's degree.
